

WHAT DOES THE ENERGY EFFICIENCY LABEL?

Everyone knows the label of energy efficiency and that, at least, because it went at least once in the supermarket next to a refrigerator. But what is that label?

Each household appliance has a specific energy efficiency label, and the common element of all labels refers to the energy classes represented. Energy efficiency classes are from A to G, A being the best in terms of energy efficiency, and the worst G.

Note that the two classes A ++ and A + apply only to refrigerators, freezers and refrigerators.
