

Franek lived with his family near a hospital. His father was a doctor. They were poor, but happy. One day his father was killed in an accident. Franek had to go to work, so his family could buy a bigger house.

The foreman in the coal mine told him that he had to dig as much coal as other miners. The work at the coal mine was easy. Franek was as strong as adult miners.

At the end of the day he sat down on the ground in the dark corridor and started singing. Suddenly he saw another light and then, an old man. The old man offered him help for a part of the money.

They started working together. Other people saw the old man and said hello to him. By the end of the week Franek and the old man dug less coal than other miners. The foreman was angry, but he let Franek stay in the coal mine.

Franek didn't want to give the money to the old man, but the old man took the money from him and disappeared. Franek understood that it had been the Treasurer of the coal mine.

Is the story all right?

Or have you noticed some mistakes?

In this case, please underline each mistake and write the correct version: