

IT specialist

- In our school you can also major in Maths and Physics. After graduating from a class like that you can study IT and later work as an IT specialist. Nowadays computers are so popular that they surround us every day and control almost everything. Therefore, there needs to be someone to maintain all of that.

- IT specialists work with lots of kinds of computer programs all the time. Some of them create programs but others may busy themselves only with technical support. Although there is plenty of programming done these days, it isn't as easy as it might seem. But neither is technical support, and not because of hard skills to acquire, but because of the unbearable customers.

- IT specialists can also be responsible for the security of companies depending on computer programming or the internet. This particular post is really important because there are unsettling amounts of hackers at the current times.
