Once upon a time there was a pig nation with a king. The king was old and sick, and he didn't know which daughter will take over his place.

So he made a competition. 'My daughters have to learn four languages, and who wins gets the kingdom.'

So the daughters began to search for their teachers. Each daughter went to different directions.

The eldest went to East, the middle to West, and the youngest to North.

Day by day the daughters learned new things.

When the day of the competition came, all of the daughters came back.

The king gave them one sentence they had to translate : „ I have learned all the languages.”

The eldest child started.

In Czech : Já nemám ráda matematiku.

In German : Ich kann fliegen.

In Portugese : Eu gosto de bacalhau.

In Italian : la pasta non é buona.

The middle child was the next.

In Czech : venku je krásné počasí.

In German : ich habe alle sprachen gegessen.

In Portugese : A luz do sol é linda.

In italian : il calcio non é lo sport piú seguito in Italia.

The youngest was the last competitor.

In Czech : Naucila jsem vsechny jazyky.

In German : ich habe alle sprachen gelernt.

In Portugese : Eu aprendi todas as línguas.

In Italian : Io ho imparato tutte le lingue.

The king announced the winner. The youngest won. She was very happy. But the king had prepared her a gift. She had to walk through a magical gate. When she walked out of it she became a beautiful princess. The rest of the daughters were envy of her, and they never talked to her. She got her own palace and she lived happily ever after.

The End
