Dear Diary,

We have been in quarantine for almost a month, locked up at home, without any possibility of going out to see friends or just going to the cinema...

This experience is unique, and allowed us to realize how we felt too, even excessively, strong in regards to the natural hazards of life, and also allowed us to realize the importance of moments spent with our loved ones.

If I could go back, I mean, in time, I think I would warn the country authorities first, so that the crisis would be taken more seriously, and that the epidemic does not spread as much. I also think that this information should have been conveyed and understood more quickly within the population, because the disobedience of the French is also a cause of the acceleration of the epidemic.

So I intend to finish, so as not to take too much time, remembering that we must realize that we are not all powerful and even less ready to face everything (but as for that point, I think that we will have remembered for the next time), but especially that all these moments spent with our loved ones are moments not to be neglected and to be appreciated as much as possible so as not to regret them later.
